Job Search Strategies

When seeking employment, your job search strategy needs to be tailored to your individual circumstances. The following tips apply to everyone, whether you are an undergraduate or a graduate student seeking an internship, co-op, part-time, or full-time position.

JOB SEARCH STRATEGIES

Don't put all your eggs in one basket.

If you limit your job search to just one method, you will limit your options.

No one job search method will reveal all the jobs out there.

Not every kind of job or industry is represented in every job search method. You have to maximize your options, and use multiple approaches.

Learn how others in your career field have been successful.

- Talk to faculty in your department.
- Talk to students who will or have graduated ahead of you.
- Talk to members of professional associations/student chapters of professional organizations.

Learn to think beyond your major.

Learn to think about occupations, industries, kinds of businesses, job skills, and career fields.

Don't expect your job search to be quick and easy.

Remember that looking for a job is a full-time job. A job search is hard work.
